

by law, and now sent again for the Sheriff and repeated his request, accompanied by a hinted hope or expectation that something might still occur to prevent his execution. The Sheriff promised to comply with this request of delaying the execution, but at the same time told him to banish all hope of a pardon or reprieve and prepare himself for that death which was inevitable, as he should be executed at four o'clock. Colt then asked to see Dr. Anthon, who entered his cell and remained praying with him for about a quarter of an hour, when Colt again sent for the Sheriff and told him that if there were any other persons who wished to take leave of him, he would be pleased to see them. Several persons, including some of the police officers, then went to take leave of him, and to one of the officers he addressed himself more particularly, and while shaking his hand said, "I am prepared for death and not afraid to die, farewell." After the persons who now visited him had retired, it being then two o'clock, or a little after, he requested to be left alone, until the moment for his execution had arrived. His cell was accordingly closed and he was left alone, until the moment for his execution had arrived. His cell was accordingly closed and he was left alone for about an hour, when one of the deputy sheriffs thought it proper to see the prisoner, lest he might have any intention of committing suicide. The officer accordingly spoke to him from the outside of the cell door and told him that he wished to bid him farewell, and at the same moment, opened the door and found Colt walking in his cell, and as soon as the officer entered it, Colt took him by the hand, shook it cordially, and bid him farewell. It was now near three o'clock, and shortly afterwards a party of officers, marching with their poles to the place of execution, betokened that the hour for it had nearly arrived, and the spectators rushed from all parts of the prison yard, and took their stations as near as each person could to the gallows. The officers arranged a lane between the people for the prisoner and those who were to attend him, to walk to the gallows, and shortly after, Judge Inglis of the Court of Common Pleas, Judge Lynch of the Court of Sessions, and a large number of Aldermen arrived and took their station close to it. Up to this time, few of the persons who had been admitted to witness the execution, knew what was the hour actually fixed for it, rumor having vaguely assigned for it different hours in the afternoon, from two o'clock to sundown. But the arrival of the Aldermen and the two Judges, accompanied by information of an official character, that the execution would take place at four o'clock, led those who were present to positively expect it at that hour, which was fast approaching. And the morbid impatience of many of the spectators was evinced by continually taking out their watches, and asking each other "will he be hanged at 4 o'clock," and others expressing a belief that he would never be hanged. While expectation was thus on tip toe and every minute that passed was supposed to be the last but one before the convict would make his appearance, Mr. Callendar, one of the Clerks in the police office, walked in between the two ranks of spectators and informed them in a loud voice that Colt was dead, and had died by his own hand. A tremendous rush instantly took place from the gallows to the door leading to that part of the prison in which Colt was confined, but before many persons could get in, the door was shut and the officers who were stationed inside and outside of it refused to admit any one. The people now became violent excited. Some of them cried out, "it's all humbug, if he is dead why not let us see him," and some of them endeavored to force in the door. This however, they could not effect, and the excitement became still greater and verged on extreme violence, when loud cries of "fire, fire in the cupola," drew the attention of every one towards it, and almost at the same instant, the wooden cupola on the prison, burst into a sheet of flame. This new and startling incident drew away the people's attention for a few minutes from the subject of Colt's alleged death, and by that time several respectable citizens who had seen Colt's body, came out of the prison and corroborated the account of his death and described the manner of it. It appeared that a few minutes before 4 o'clock, the Sheriff and his deputy, accompanied by Dr. Anthon, went to Colt's cell for the purpose of leading him to execution, and on opening the door, found him lying dead on his bed, with a dirk knife sticking in his heart.

equal to that of most men; his mental endowments are as extraordinary as that of his physical. When angry but few men can master him, which will at once be perceptible from his great muscular development. His voice is that of a FULL GROWN MAN."

PATENT COB AND Corn Mill.
THE subscriber has the rights for this and Holmes county for a Mill to grind Cobs and Corn together, or separately. This invention is of the most simple and practical kind and is applied to the common plantation mills of the country now in use, requiring no additional expense for new buildings, frame work, new mill stones or machinery excepting the simple apparatus furnished by the subscriber himself. The use of these mills has become quite general in Adams and Jefferson counties and other parts of this State and Louisiana. They are afforded at a comparatively trifling sum, and besides furnishing a superior feed for stock it is estimated by those now using them, including many of the first Planters of the last above mentioned counties and Louisiana, that the saving effected thereby is from one-third to one-half. The subscriber now offers these mills to the Planters of Madison and Holmes and is prepared to attend to any applications that may be made from either. One of the mills can be seen at Major W. F. Walker's plantation, 4 miles from Canton, and the subscriber can be seen or heard of and further information obtained by inquiry of Jacob Mitchell, Esq., Canton, or Messrs. Giles & Robb, Vernon.

More than a thousand cures, and not a single failure!!!
GREEN'S FEVER AND AGUE MIXTURE.
WARRANTED to cure the Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, without the aid of any other medicine, in any case where the directions are followed. The proprietors have sold in their immediate neighborhood over 1000 bottles of the Ague and Fever Mixture, not one of which has failed to cure. Hundreds of Certificates could be produced, some from one of the first men of the country; but we think that the very best recommendation it can have, is to say to all afflicted with the Fever and Ague, or Chills and Fever, is to procure a bottle of Green's Ague and Fever Mixture, and take it according to directions, and when it is all taken, if you are not perfectly cured, call and your money will be returned.
It is also a sovereign preventative against Intermittent, Remittent, Billious and Yellow Fevers, and those who will use the Mixture to prevent their occurrence, will save themselves, as well as their families, from the danger of an attack of either of the above fevers, will find great benefit from the use of a bottle of the mixture.
